

Structured Language Experience Story “ake” #2

One winter morning when the snowflakes were falling, Fran and Jake were awakened by the news that school had been closed for the day. They decided to plan a clambake and called all their acquaintances. They explained to them that they needed to come dressed in an outfit that contained an item of a star of a cartoon, such as Superman or Batman. Fran made the mistake of asking Jake, the scatterbrain of the family, to buy what supplies would be needed for the event. Upon his return he only had a rattlesnake that he had seen in the pet store window. So Fran explained to Jake to stay home and make pancakes while she went to buy the clams, milkshakes and paint for the keepsakes that she planned on making for the guests. Later as the guests arrived there was entertainment for all as they guessed each other's cartoon namesake and ate the fruitcakes that were supposed to be pancakes.
