

Structured Language Experience Story “al” #2

Walter thought he was hallucinating as he saw a calico falcon and a salami cross the hallway. What malady did he have that made him see invalid objects? Walter thought to himself that he must be maladjusted or else his brain was malfunctioning.

These thoughts galvanized Walter into action. He calculated that he was too sleepy, so Walter did some calisthenics to wake up. Now he challenged himself to salvage the rest of the night. However, he faltered with his plan as he saw more hallucinations. Walking down the hall was a gallant knight, a paltry halibut, and a pink Dalmatian. Walter knew his heart was palpitating, as he realized that there was no salvation for him. But, the gallant knight, the paltry halibut, and the pink Dalmatian were getting closer. Sweat was pouring down Walter’s scalp. When they were next to him, they yelled, “Happy Halloween!”

Walter smiled. He wasn’t maladjusted; he had just forgotten to look at the calendar!
