

Structured Language Experience Story “ang” #2

In Bangor there lived a friendly vampire with no fangs. He lost them by dangling from a mustang. Bang! Clang! He hit a rectangular post and lost all his teeth. He was not angry about his mangled mouth. He disentangled his face from the post and sprang to his feet.

He rang his dentist, who looked in his mouth with a mirror set at an angle.

“No more fangs for you,” sang the dentist.

“Fang you very much,” said the vampire.