

Structured Language Experience Story “as(s)” #1

The castaways were on a massive island after their boat, the Brass Lass, ran out of gasoline. Their passage had been nasty since the passengers were not passive. These sassy passengers said that the music from the cassette was too brassy as they danced on the glass floor. Also, they commented that the casserole and grasshopper pie were classless. But, when the Brass Lass ran out of gas, it left them grasping the rails and gasping nastily.

Stepping into the island's grass, they asked the skipper in waspish tones if they would be home in time for the masquerade ball.

The skipper said, “I've never steered a boat before this classy Brass Lass. This is just my costume for tonight's masked ball.”

This vast island was now the castaways' home.
