

Structured Language Experience Story “ast” #1

The last time the broadcaster did the newscast she said it so fast that no one could understand her. During the weather cast, she said the next few days would be covered in overcast. There was no overcast, just wind blasts coming from the west. This flabbergasted the broadcaster. She decided that she should try to be a sportscaster. Unfortunately, she was typecast as a fast talker, so the network canceled her telecast. She decided to move back to her hometown of Lancaster and take the test to be a postmaster. She passed the test and had at last mastered a career with which she was happy.
