

Structured Language Experience Story “ea” #2

Standing on the teak deck of the seaworthy ship, Dean looked at the sun gleaming on the peaceful sea. Unlike his wife, Jean, he had not experienced queasiness during last night's beastly storm. She had pleaded with him to make the waves cease their beating. Dean was reasonably sure that Jean would be pleased with today's weather.

Dean took one more look at the peaceful sea. Then he wanted to give his wife special treatment after her queasy night. So, he cleaned the cabin and made a feast of meatball sandwiches. As he finished, Jean woke up and was pleased with the neatness of the cabin, the peacefulness of the sea, and Dean's thoughtfulness in making the meatball feast.
