

Structured Language Experience Story “er” #2

The serene person, Bertha, permitted her nervous servant, Merv, to serve dinner on the patio. As she ate, Bertha derived great pleasure from the nearby waterfall, geraniums, and ferns. Yet, the terse servant appeared serious as he served her German pancakes. Bertha asked him what was causing him so much misery that it altered his personality.

Merv said that he was certain he had seen a mermaid. Bertha gave Merv permission to leave her. Merv ran with fervor to the location where the sand merged with the water. He was nervous to enter the water since the thermometer registered a low number. Merv didn't even notice the vermin on the sand as he scanned the water. Suddenly, Merv saw a flipper emerge perpendicular to the buoy. As it came towards him, Merv laughed as he realized that it was a thermal rubber suit of a scuba diver. Merv returned to the patio to serve Bertha her dessert of orange sherbet.
