

Structured Language Experience Story “ied” #2

Mr. Galied implied that the class had not tried on the test. He told us that if we had complied with his guidelines and had studied, we wouldn't have relied on just classroom notes and done so poorly.

Many students had vied to get the top score. Susie Soried cried and denied that she hadn't tried. Tommy Wulied notified Mr. Galied that his aunt had died. So, as much as Tommy had tried to study, family needs couldn't be denied.

As students tried to be the next one glorified by their peers, Mr. Galied cried, “Stop, I want all of you notified that your parents received your test in today's mail!” Mr. Galied spied tears as many mortified students tried not to cry. They knew the test scores couldn't be denied.
