

Structured Language Experience Story “in” #2

Ginger had finished fishing in her indigo boat. Inadvertently, she did not tie the boat tightly to the cinder block. Her inability to tie knots caused the dingy boat to inch its way across the lake to the tinsmith's cabin. Instead of driving to the cabin, Ginger began walking through the sinister forest in search of her boat. She followed the sound of the nightingales. It was the pinnacle of Ginger's day to reach the tinsmith's cabin. He served her cinnamon muffins before she sailed her dingy indigo boat back home.