

Structured Language Experience Story “ink” #1

Mack was a little boy who played hockey. He was on a winning team, and enjoyed skating at the rink. He was a good hockey player, and needed large drinks of water after each game. His parents always came to watch him play, and held up pink “way to go” signs when he scored a goal. At the championship game, Mack had to skate fast and think about playing well. During one play in the game the other team scored a goal. Mack’s hopes of winning began to sink as time was running out. On the next play Mack passed everyone, and in the blink of an eye scored a goal to tie the game. His team went on to win, and as a reward they went out for drinks of pink lemonade and pizza.
