

Structured Language Experience Story “ire” #2

Firecrackers were exploding and fireworks lit the night sky! The entire empire was celebrating the squire's end to being mired in dire circumstances. No longer would his phone be wiretapped since the required debt had been paid.

The people of Devonshire admired this tired squire. Squire McGire had spend his entire life with a tiresome debt created by a great fire of his childhood. It had been the squire's father who had built a large fire in the kitchen fireplace that ended up burning the entire home.

After the fire, the elder squire acquired debt, as he borrowed money from questionable sources. It had taken the younger squire twenty years of working as a firefighter and the sale of the family's sapphires to erase the debt. Now the people of Devonshire rejoiced in the glow of the fireworks!
