

Structured Language Experience Story “old” #2

It's been foretold that old-timers are no longer jobholders. With time on their hands, a group of these oldsters decided to be overbold and open another business. Using their wisdom, they grew and sold marigolds. Withholding their business secrets from others, their business began to scaffold to the top. They outsold other florists and soon their billfolds were overflowing with money. These oldsters were soon upholding new positions as jobholders again.