

Structured Language Experience Story “ore” #1

The lore of the Oregon forest is that if you explore where our forefathers explored, you will find a treasure. Out of boredom, I decided to investigate this tale.

The first thing that happened to me is that I tore my brand new jeans. Some treasure. Wait until my mom finds out about it. Next, I found what I thought were spores, but it turned out to be oregano. Finally, I decided to turn back, My muscles were developing soreness and I knew I would probably never find my way out of this forest.

I guess I will never be a great explorer like our forefathers were.
