

Structured Language Experience Story “ore” #2

The bored storekeeper tried to stay awake by doing more chores in the storeroom. He moved the books on folklore that were stored by the door. However, it was a foregone conclusion that this wouldn't stop his boredom.

His wife had implored him to explore more possibilities for the store. But, soon she heard his snores coming from the storeroom. Forestalling a fight, his wife spent the time on her hobby of choreography.

Once the storekeeper's snores had stopped, his wife put her forefinger on her forehead and had a thought. She went to talk to him. She said, “Forevermore, we will both be bored running this store. Let's explore our dreams instead!”

They tore themselves away from the boredom of the store's chores. Moreover, their dreams lead them to fame, and they became a part of the area's folklore.

