

Structured Language Experience Story “ow” #2

An owlet of very little knowledge decided to go out on the prowl for some smaller fowl to eat. He decided to go ask an old and a profoundly wise owl for some help on how to become a better prowler. As he walked up to the insightful owl's door he became very nervous so he tried to paste down his cowlick so that he would look proper. The old owl let him in and told him the answers that he requested.

“First, you need to put out a bowl to attract the smaller fowl,” said the owl with a scowl. “Finally, swoop in for the kill!” His growling tummy told the owlet it was time to go and test out this theory.

He tried what the wise owl had told him and he was successful at every hunt.
