

Structured Language Experience Story “ture” #2

A special feature about adventures in nature captured my attention. I could picture myself surrounded by the wonders of the horticultural world. I'd be sailing down a river in rapture trying to decide at the juncture which way to go next. There would be new creatures appearing featureless as they are hidden in the trees.

The picturesqueness of my thoughts made me smile, until my thoughts were punctured as I wondered if I'd see a vulture in my nature adventure. It didn't matter. Instead of buying new furniture from the manufacturer, I was going to plan an adventure in the wilderness of nature.

That very night, I listened to a nature lecturer of world wide stature. Nature was a culture open to all people and creatures. I went home nurturing thoughts of my future vacation in nature.
